

School Renovations & Additions

Section by Savannah Yates

As students have all noticed, the big cafeteria is rarely used by most of the students and has been needing a redesign to accommodate the ever growing amount of students. Due to the lack of seating for students and a lack of space for the staff to make and supply meals to the students, it is finally time to expand our campus to make room for the future graduates of Beekman Charter School. Cafeteria employee Danielle Kendrick answered some questions about the upcoming renovation.

Q: What are your thoughts on the future additions to the cafeteria?

A: "It's going to be great, it will be a lot to get used to, but when it's finished it will be a big help... it's much needed since the [current] cafeteria is for 200-300 students but we need to feed 800-900 students... with the lack of space for storing the food, we end up having to run all over the school to prepare everything...The lack of counter-space makes it hard to have the food ready for the students in time and not run out..."

The ULM Social Studies Fair

Section by Brianna Mason

On February second, ULM held a social studies fair at ULM Fant-Ewing Coliseum. Students were allowed to select any topic they were interested in. The social studies teacher had to approve each topic to make sure it was appropriate and that only one group worked on that topic.

Thirty-seven students in all attended regionals. Twenty-three projects in all. Kayda Petty says "Yes" she was nervous before presenting "because I thought I could mess up." When preparing for the project, "I get all the things I need and go from there." Overall the fair was a very big success.

Virtual School: Liked or Disliked?

Section by Skylar Fragala

Beekman Charter high school students were asked if virtual school was easy for them. There were very mixed emotions about it. Some said it was easy, some said it was hard, and some were in the middle. They were also asked how was their virtual experience compared to normal school. AJ Higginbotham said "my virtual experience was good because I slept all day." When asked about her virtual experience Charlie Herring said "it was alright." She says the only hard part was "Mrs. Thompson." Many students said they would not pass if we went to virtual. Some students can not work in an environment where they relax and sleep. Dominic Courson said his virtual experience was "very stressful" and believes "students will achieve more at school." Teachers often have a point of view than students do. Ms. Cain said "I struggle with not having my normal routine. I also did not like not having face-to-face interactions with my students. I hated sitting at my desk, constantly staring at a computer screen!" Coach Lee said "I enjoyed some of it, I missed the daily routine of class with students but it was also great to have time without them."
